NEW YEAR IN CHINA STOPS FIGHTING HUNDREDS FACE STARVATION IN EASTERN FLOOD

APPEAL FOR AID SENT GOVERNOR OF ARKANSAS

Thousands Homeless in Worst Flood in White
River History

(By Universal Service)
LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Feb. 1.—Refugees from the flood area declared that this and other White River towns must have food. The communities to which the refugees have fled cannot meet the situation without outside help.

That is the situation as reported today when an appeal was made to the governor for aid.

Governor Marineau turned the request over to Brigadier General Wayne, adjutant general of the Arkansas National Guard, and to the executive secretary of the American Red Cross.

Two guard officers and Red Cross workers are taking up relief work.

The flood is probably the worst in the history of this section. Two thousand persons are said to be homeless, without food other than what communities in which they have taken refuge can furnish.

From the levee break at Pioneer plantation, said today that water ten to fifteen feet deep stands over a thousand acres. Inhabitants are marooned on house tops and second stories waiting for rescue parties.

JILTED LOVER SHOOTS GIRL

(By Universal Service)
CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—Vincent Michele, in custody today for the shooting, probably fatally, last night of pretty Marie Perry, declared to the authorities that he does not fear trial.

The man said he shot the girl because she jilted him after he had spent some $50,000 on gifts for her. She is lying in a hospital in a critical condition, with small chance for recovery. She has two bullet holes in her face, and two in her back.

"I'm not afraid of conviction," he said. "I'm a bootlegger with lots of jack, and whoever heard of a bootlegger with plenty of money being convicted."

The authorities said that he had about $25,000 in cash in the bank and securities amounting to double that sum. They believe he is an imported gunman. He admitted that he had served a term in Sing Sing.

Cigaret Causes $250,000 Blaze

(By Universal Service)
ANN ARBOR, Mich., Feb. 1.—A cigarette carelessly tossed beneath a bed, escaping the eye of a nurse who was entering a convalescent ward of the University hospital, is believed by hospital authorities to have caused a fire that perished 250 lives and resulted in the loss of nearly $250,000 worth of property here tonight.

BIRTHS RECORDED

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander M. Dawson, 549 Sixth street, are the parents of a son, born to them at the Richmond Maternity hospital, January 27, according to a birth certificate filed with the City Health Department yesterday.

Browning Case Is Rested; To Be Resumed In Two Weeks

Daddy Takes Stand and Denies All Charges
Made by Peaches

By DAMON RUNYON
(By Universal Service)

COPYRIGHT UNIVERSAL SERVICE
WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Feb. 1.—Well, folks, it was pretty sticky up here in White Plains today in the way of testimony as old Daddy Seeger, who has been standing on the witness stand and rattled his tale of woe against the weighty young Peaches and they finally put the cover back on their matrimonial garbage can for a couple of weeks.

Both sides rested after Daddy had denied all, as the F. J. Old head line writers say, and after Peaches had also denied all once more, just for good measure, and Supreme Court Judge Seeger, who has been hearing the case, gave the attorneys a recess in which to prepare their briefs in place of oral arguments.

Poor Henry Epstein, the bashful barrister who is representing Peaches, was quite overcome during his cross-examination of Daddy, probably by the fumes of Daddy's testimony. Epstein sat down very suddenly during the attention session while Daddy was fumbling with answers to questions. Epstein's face was quite white and his hands shook.

Epstein Wants Air

"Can't we have a little air, your honor?" he asked, plaintively and everybody brightened up. All felt the need of a little air after listening to Daddy.

Judge Seeger promptly ordered a few windows opened while balliffs hurried water to Epstein's succor. Peaches and her maw, Mrs. Heenan, who were seated at Epstein's table, leaned forward solicitously.

Someone dashed out into the crowded main stem of White Plains, fighting his way through the packed corridors of the court house and returned with some spirits of ammonia. Epstein inconsiderately drank the ammonia instead of sprinkling it about the premises, and giving other unfortunate relief.

Courtroom Packed
Five-minute recess was given Epstein by Judge Seeger, and everybody managed to revive more or less and continue listening to "Daddy."

The courtroom was packed to what you might call suffocation, and the ladies present seemed to stand it better than the men. In fact, they proved themselves gluttons for punishment, as the boys say. Some removed their modish helmets that they might not miss a word that

Serious Gasoline Fire Is Narrowly Averted At Garage

What might have become a serious fire at Frank A. Scholtes' garage, 1427 Macdonald avenue, was averted early yesterday afternoon by the quick work of employees and the local fire department.

The blaze started when Rodney Burke, mechanic at the garage, was cleaning the engine of a car in the garage with gasoline. The gasoline on the brush became ignited when it formed a short circuit on a wire leading from the generator, and burst into flames.

The fire department was called and with the cooperation of the garage the fire was put out before any damage could be done.

The Venetian Touch in Present Day Ohio

"Stop, Look and Listen!" So read the immersed railway sign in this Pomeroy, O., flood scene. Plenty to look at, but what is there to listen to? This latest and vivid view gives an idea of flood conditions in this territory. Ohio river has been rising one-tenth of a foot an hour.

Southern Pacific Officials And Chamber Directors Seek Way To Improve Ferry Traffic

Officials of the Southern Pacific company and members of the Chamber of Commerce of the Richmond San Francisco automobile ferry, were discussed.

Railroad officials informed the Chamber directors that the company was suffering a loss on the line each month and asked for suggestions as to how the service might be improved to net a profit for the operators.

Possibilities of a direct route to the ferry from the north, which would bring tourist traffic to the ferry by a direct route was among the methods to improve the service that were discussed.

Brawl On Ship Injures Sailor

MARTINEZ, Feb. 1.—A fight over a card game on the Tanker Los Angeles, docked at the Shell Refinery wharf here last night, resulted in serious injuries for G. Ustet, a sailor. He was taken to the Marine hospital in San Francisco today for treatment for severe scalp and facial lacerations.

Usted charged that he was attacked from behind and beaten with a heavy instrument. Seaman who witnessed the brawl informed Deputy Sheriff J. M. Joseph that Ustet had been drinking and attacked Jose Hernandez with a knife.

Hernandez was uninjured. No arrests were made.

PROPOSERS OF ADEQUATE NAVY WIN IN SENATE

Appropriation Voted For Building New
Cruisers

By JAMES R. NOURSE
(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Proponents of an adequate navy won a smashing victory in the senate today when by a vote of 49 to 27 an appropriation of $1,200,000 to start immediate construction on three of the scout cruisers, authorized in 1924, but never begun, was carried in the naval appropriation bill.

Passage of the amendment was a distinct defeat for President Coolidge's economy plan and for the director of the budget, who opposed any appropriation for cruiser construction this year. As recently as last Saturday the President declared himself opposed to the appropriation which advocates of a stronger navy had proposed in the senate.

The amendment increases the house appropriation for construction from $14,950,000 and directs that of this amount the sum of $1,200,000 be used immediately available to begin construction of three of the eight authorized scout cruisers.

A similar amendment was offered in the House when the appropriation bill was under consideration, but was defeated by the democrats by a misapprehension as to President Coolidge's real attitude.

The democrats were of the opinion that because Republican leader Tilton and Speaker Longworth supported the amendment the President was secretly in favor of it, and their votes resulted.

Crazed Mexican Soldier Kills 4 In Train Battle

(By Universal Service)
MEXICO CITY, Feb. 1.—A midnight battle in which four soldiers of the troop escort were killed by a maddened comrade in a prolonged clash aboard the Laurito and Mexico City train, was described in a report received here tonight by the National Railway headquarters.

The panic stricken passengers feared first the train had been attacked by rebels and next that the troop escort had revolted while firing continued unabated in the second class car occupied by the soldiers.

The firing began just after the south bound train had passed Saltillo when a crazed soldier from behind an improvised barricade opened fire on his comrades. Four soldiers were killed before the officer commanding the escort, single handed, penetrated the barricade and seized the maniac who after being disarmed, was gagged at the next station and delivered to the military authorities.

Store And Flat To Be Constructed

A store and residence building will be erected on two corner lots at Twenty-third street and Maricopa avenue by Thomas M. Perini, of Oakland, following his recent purchase of the property from the Richmond company. Business will be conducted on the lower floor, while a five room flat will occupy the second. Leo Perisio and Frank Foster handled the deal.

CARS COLLIDE

No one was injured and but slight damage was done when cars driven by A. Davini, Crockett and Charles Kessely, Richmond, collided on San Pablo avenue yesterday afternoon.

RAISED TEN CHILDREN ADOPTS FIVE

MARTINEZ, Feb. 1.—Although she had raised ten children to manhood and womanhood, Mrs. Mary Ewing of Pacheco couldn't be happy with out children so she and her husband, Harry J. Ewing have adopted five more.

The new members of the family, orphans ranging in age from seven to sixteen years were obtained by Mr. and Mrs. Ewing yesterday through the Children's Home Society of California.

The couple formally adopted the youngsters yesterday afternoon. Superior Judge H. V. Alvarado approving the petitions.

It was learned that Mr. and Mrs. Ewing had raised five of their own children and then adopted five more. And when these children grew up they married and started families of their own.

Mr. and Mrs. Ewing decided that they couldn't be happy unless they had children about the home.

The court inquired into their financial responsibility and representatives of the home society furnished all the references that were necessary.

The children, they adopted all of one family, were John Seidler, 7, Olga Seidler, 11, Emil Seidler, 13, David Seidler, 15 and Matilda Seidler, 16.

ANTI-FOREIGN OUTBREAK IS SEEN IN OFFING

Troops Muster Strength
As Celebration Brings
Temporary Truce

(By Universal Service)

SHANGHAI, Feb. 1.—War in China was suspended today in observance of the Chinese New Year but there is every indication that when the festival is over the war will be renewed with more vigor in the new year.

Although a quietus has been put on the fighting the movement of troops has not been suspended. The Nationalists are rushing up reinforcements and distributing them along the entire Yangtze river in preparation for battle with the northern forces whenever they strike.

The new alliance between General Wu Pei Fu and Marshal Chang Tso Lin, is being cemented by the combined northern forces upon Hankow.

But while all these preparations are being made the men in the ranks have received a small bonus and have forgotten their enemies for a few days.

Civilians are celebrating with an exchange of gifts and everywhere is seen the inscription "Hsi" which means happiness.

Foreigners are keeping to themselves for fear that the celebration may turn to anti-foreign outbreak.

WORLD'S LARGEST RADIO USER

The world's largest user of radio for information purposes is the United States Department of Agriculture, says the National Republic. Its daily educational program of a half-hour or more broadcast from one hundred stations, together with the market news service and weather forecasts, makes up a grand total of hours on the air not approached by any other single user of radio for non-entertainment purposes. Already radio has definitely proved its effectiveness as a supplemental agency in spreading the department's educational matter. That the programs are successfully holding their own in competition is evidenced by the thousands of letters flowing daily into the radio service office. Stations express their own appreciation of the government services and that of their audiences as well. Farmers, who ordinarily find little time or inclination for correspondence, write many letters of appreciation and commendation.

Personal Health Service

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received, only a few can be answered by Dr. Brady. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. Address Dr. William Brady, in care of this newspaper. Name you wish on your return envelope. Don't say "city."

A. F. H. B. P.

Every one who has gone out much to dine with friends or had friends in to dine, knows the meaning of F. H. B. and M. I. K. At any rate father knows the importance of signalling family hold back and mother knows the relief of the assurance that there is more in kitchen.

I should like to borrow the F. H. B. legend or the idea for a label which, if I were king, would go on every box, bottle or package of physic sold. I favor a law prohibiting false, fraudulent, unreasonably or exaggerated assertions as to the effect of physics. Not only such assertions on the label but the lies the purchaser gets in circulars, booklets or other wrapping or packing with the physic. If the reign of King William (not to confuse the name with that of old King Brady) ever does come to pass I'll see to it that a large and unmistakable label shall go on every package of physic apprising the purchaser that A. F. H. B. P.

All physics do hold back peristalsis. There is no denying that. Even the grannies know that every dose of castor oil is inevitably followed by a next day, binding effect. Even the poor gullible goof who imagines some kind of salubrious or laxative or herb physic "purifies the blood" knows that his easiness is rather worse the day after the insult to his digestion than it was the day before.

Of course my royal no fooling with drugs act would not apply to petroleum jelly or paraffin, nor to bran, nor to seaweed nor to flaxseed, for under my regime no one would dare to call these things physics. These things do not increase peristalsis, but only render the residue more easily propelled by the peristaltic contractions.

Petroleum jelly is known by various trade names, but officially it is called petrolatum. Soft petrolatum which is nearly colorless is not repugnant to taste and even the common yellowish petrolatum jelly is not disagreeable for some persons. This is generally preferable and less expensive than the innumerable brands of liquid petroleum or "mineral oil," and a teaspoonful more or less, taken night and morning regularly for a few weeks, enables many a victim of the constipation habit to overcome the habit. It is generally advisable not to take petrolatum in any form near mealtime, for it tends to coat the food with a film of oil which is of course not digestible.

The practice of eating a dish of plain wheat bran with or as a breakfast cereal is a healthful one for everyone except a real invalid who should have his physician's advice. Propaganda lately issued, at the behest of the physic interests I believe, should not frighten any one off his bran. Even better than the plain bran is the eating of the entire unmilled wheat, either raw or cooked a little while or cooked for hours, according to individual preference. Many persons find that a daily spoonful of unground flaxseed, washed down raw with water serve the purpose which the expensive seaweed preparations serve, to furnish a bulky residue which retains considerable moisture and

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Imagination Overworks
I have noticed in your column, you have several times told about a pamphlet or booklet which you have to distribute, on the "Cause Results and Cure of Constipation." How could a person get a copy of your treatise? (R. P.)

Answer—I have never intimated that I have such a booklet or pamphlet. I have repeatedly said that constipation is just a bad habit, not a disease. I have also tried to dissuade readers of the morbid notion that there is any serious result from delayed or postponed bowel movement. Finally I have several times announced that I am glad to send to readers who write and request it, "Rules for Recovery From the Constipation Habit," provided they say they have the habit and enclose a stamped envelope bearing the address to which I am to send the rules. I have never said I had a cure for constipation or for anything else, for that matter. Herein is one of the few distinctions between the ordinary quack and myself. By this token I would, as soon as possible, address me as Dear Quack or My Dear Humbug as that they should say "I see you claim . . . can be cured." On the face of it any remedy or treatment or method which purports to be a cure for any ailment is more or less fraudulent, and any person who purports to have or know of a "sure cure" for any ailment is in my judgment either ignorant or dishonest or both.

Birth Mark
I have a birth mark on my forehead that I would like to get rid of. If you can tell me how to do this and what treatment you would prescribe. (J. K.)

Answer—Consult a physician, or one who is a skin specialist if you prefer, and leave the method of treatment to his judgment. Do not tamper with such a blemish or permit anyone to do so.

OUR CONVERSATION CORNER

Molly-Make-Believe

My girl of six is full of make-believe. I never know whether she is lying or telling the truth. How can I stop it?

Answer—The things you tell me she talks about, she sees in her kingdom of the imagination. If she tells you that a big rat carried off the jar of jam or that a man gave her that dollar which you afterwards find not your purse, I would agree with your desire to stop these fairy tales. But children often dream and pretend in a land which they manufacture out of whole cloth because this land of make-believe is a pleasant and happier place than the real world of pains, pleasures, and bigger brother. Adults read novels and attend movies so that they may take refuge from the realities of life. Why you deny your little girl's similar release? I wouldn't.

WHAT'S WRONG HERE

ANSWER—Walking fast, running or hurrying is a mark of vulgarity, implying a rush of business, which may be all right for the tradesman, but does not set well upon the shoulders of gentlemen of leisure. It is considered more or less of a degradation to work for a living, especially since bootlegging can be learned at most of our leading colleges and furnishes wealth without health.

Men Who Made the World: FERNANDO CORTEZ

By Dr. Elliot Shoring, the Noted Historian

THIS DANGEROUS EXPEDITION THROUGH SAVAGE AND UNKNOWN LANDS, CORTEZ, AFFECTED THE POMP AND CEREMONY OF A PERSIAN SATRAP. BESIDES THE NECESSARY SOLDIERS AND EQUIPMENT, GUIDES, INDIAN ALLIES AND CAMP FOLLOWERS, HE TOOK WITH HIM VAULTS, PAGES AND GROOMS, TO WHICH HE ADDED MUSICIANS, JUGGLERS AND ACROBATS, TO AMUSE THE COMPANY. A STRANGE PROCEDURE FOR A MAN OF CORTEZ' DYNAMIC NATURE. DONA MARINA ACCOMPANIED HIM AS INTERPRETER. ALL THIS FORMS AN INTERESTING NEW PICTURE OF THE CHARACTER OF CORTEZ. AT THIRTY-SIX YEARS OF AGE HE HAD SUCCESSFULLY COMPLETED AS DARING AND MOMENTOUS AN UNDERSTANDING AS CAN BE FOUND IN THE PAGES OF ALL HISTORY. IN THE COURSE OF THAT CONQUEST HE PROVED HIMSELF A MOST RESOURCEFUL GENIUS, AND IT IS AS THE CONQUEROR OF MEXICO THAT HE TAKES HIS PLACE AMONG THE WORLD'S GREATEST HEROES.

THE EXPEDITION NOW MOVED THROUGH UNKNOWN YUCATAN. THIS COUNTRY WAS OVERGROWN WITH FORESTS SO THICK THAT FOR DAYS THE SPANISH MARCHED IN VERTICAL GLOOM, UNABLE TO SEE THE SKY AT MID-DAY. DISUAL SWAMPS, REPTILE-RIDDEN, SPREAD AWAY IN THE DISTANCE. THE HARSHIPS ENDURED BY CORTEZ AND HIS MEN ON THIS JOURNEY ARE ALMOST UNBELIEVABLE. THEY WERE SO REDUCED BY HUNGER, FATIGUE AND SO DEPAIRING OF EVER GETTING OUT OF THE WILDERNESS ALIVE, THAT THEY WERE ON THE VERGE OF OPEN MURDER. NOW CORTEZ CORNERED ONE OF CORTEZ' MOST AMAZING FEATS. OVER THE GREATEST OF THE SWAMPS, THIS DARING COMMANDER NOW HAD CONSTRUCTED AN AMAZING BRIDGE OF ONE THOUSAND THREE TRUNKS EACH SIXTY FEET LONG AND SOME TWO FEET IN DIAMETER. SO TITANIC WAS THIS TASK THAT HIS MEN OPENLY REBELLED. THEIR DAUNTLESS LEADER ALONED THEM BY BUILDING THE BRIDGE EXCLUSIVELY WITH INDIAN AID. (To Be Continued)

College Boy and College Girl

Did "College Boy" describe a mid-Victorian antiquity when he told us the kind of girl he admired? A number of college girl correspondents strongly hinted that "College Boy's" type of girl can well be spared.

Perhaps you have forgotten what College Boy told us. If so I am sorry. You only read and talking to youth today are conducting once a week this column of LOST AND FOUND IDEAS AND IDEALS. Do you remember the letter from "Twenty Nine" who said: "A girl who is too good gets cheated," and "Tepikin" who acknowledges that he is a "social jack-ass." Just back to "College Boy." Here is the reply of "College Girl." How do you like it?

"I am a modern college girl and quite naturally the girl 'College Boy' describes seems to me a mid-Victorian antiquity. If there are any such as he described left in the world they should be captured and carefully preserved for they will soon be extinct. And I think that is as should be. 'This is a portrait of the girl to-day as I know them: 'Smoking, to the modern girl, is simply a matter of taste. If she likes cigarettes she smokes them and if she doesn't she does not hold up her hands in righteous horror. She is worldly enough to know that she need not be a prude to be respectable.

"The modern girl is intelligent and quick-witted. A young man need not be afraid that she cannot meet any situation gracefully. She dresses well and in good taste. She uses cosmetics and is immaculately clean. She is not a snob, but she does not go in for the promiscuous 'necking' but neither does she become haughty and arrogantly virtuous and jump as if at a snake bite someone should happen to touch her.

"She loves the outdoors and has as her hobby some form of outdoor exercise that keeps her vigorous and graceful far into middle age. This girl is a home-maker. But that does not mean she is a drudge and cook who spends her whole day at home. On the contrary, she is an interesting and efficient woman. I have known were those who had interests outside of their homes. Energetically she is able to keep the inspiration and companionship of their husbands and children through life.

"The modern girl has a personality and a mind that functions. You cannot say to her, 'be a good girl, sweet maid and let who will be clever.' The modern maid is clever and because she is so she knows that virtue is not simply a negation of vice. SHE IS BORN BEING INTELLIGENTLY GOOD.

College Girl"

Well, readers, do I hear any applause?

The Marriage Game

As Played to a Decision
Every Day By
Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Patton

BEYOND THIS VALE

HIS PLAY: Now don't start in saying I am morbid but I can't resist saying whenever I hear of a married man dying penniless as Bill Blank died yesterday that a wife has a right to demand and see to it that her husband makes provision for her—widowhood. Death is inevitable and widows suffer unaccustomed hardships when it is discovered they are left alone in a cruel and unheeding world. A man assumes the obligation to look after a woman all her lifetime when he married her—not merely all his lifetime.

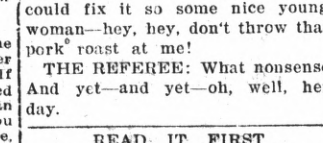

Yes, a man's duty is to make provisions so the force of the blow of his sudden loss be softened.

HIS COUNTER PLAY: I agree with you right up to the hilt. And that duty is mutual. Just think of the predicament of poor old Sam Sunflower. I couldn't help but think of it when his wife up and died and left him alone in that little cottage. There he was, deprived of female society with nobody to care whether his breakfast was ready and nobody to go to the movies with him, seeing he's so old and homely and about broke. Death is inevitable and widowers suffer unaccustomed hardships when it is discovered they are left alone in a cruel and unheeding world. A woman assumes the obligation to look after a man all his lifetime when she marries him—not merely all her lifetime. Now if a wife could fix it so some nice young woman—hey, hey, don't throw that pork roast at me!

THE REFEREE: What nonsense. And yet—and yet—oh, well, her day.

CHAPTER XVI—Continued

Every road cars moving, dashing, heedless of the storm, converging upon the scene of disaster. John Ballard at the wheel of one, outstripping all the rest, tense, desperate with agony and fear.

A train moving slowly, a white-faced engineer leaning out looking for washouts, for spread rails. Behind him a great, sinister wrecking crane. Behind that a row of cars, bearing nurses, doctors, stretchers, bandages, drugs.

Something on the track—an abandoned handcar. The fireman leaped down, pulled and tugged to clear the track.

And ahead in the ravine of Ram's Creek red hell. A jumbled mass of burning wreckage, sending tongues of sullen flames up, even through the rain. A babel of groans, curses, moans. Hissing steam from an overturned engine. Men and women, twisted, distorted, lying about. Others, dragging themselves painfully, aimlessly, hither and thither.

Slowly, slowly order came out of chaos. Men swarmed over the wreck like ants. Great blue torches blazed, cutting into the steel sides of the overturned sleepers. Searchlights lighted the scene. Pairs of men bore stretchers in an endless stream to the waiting train. Doctors and surgeons plied their trade. But many, most of those still forms that were borne away on the stretchers are beyond the aid of doctors, nurses, any human hands or hearts.

John Ballard moved like a man bereft through the maze. Among the first to come, he had done what he could, always looking, looking. Once, and again, and yet again, he met Jordan, seeking, too—seeking, had John but known it, the same form for which his own eyes searched.

"You can stand—you can walk!"

He cried.

He had no clue. He did not know what car she had been in, he had no way of knowing where to search. Nor had Jordan.

John heard the ceaseless murmur of Jordan's voice.

"A small black box—steel, I suppose. Marked P. H.—Personal."

He neither knew nor cared what Jordan meant. Viola! She was here somewhere in this shambles. Dead? He almost hoped she was. The matter was plain—she was never worked, tactically, desperately, to make an opening, while inside flames did their work, and shrieks unheeded came from those imprisoned.

But, hopeless though it was, he never gave up his search. He climbed the side of the ravine at last to where, high up, part of a car was caught. It was overturned. The sinister red glare of the searchlights came from it. As he moved near it, trying to make sure whether anyone alive was there, he heard a voice that galvanized him.

"Help!" it cried feebly. "Help!"

He almost cried. The miracle had come to pass! He had found her.

"Viola!" he shouted. "Viola!"

He saw her in a moment. She was caught, held down by some heavy object. Ten feet away the fire was creeping toward her; she could feel its heat.

"John!" she said. "Oh John!"

Mercifully, she faintly.

He never knew afterward how he contrived to free her. Something he did, making a lever of a sapling he uprooted. He struggled for what seemed hours. Three times he beat out the fire as sparks set her clothing to smouldering. Then suddenly, when he had all but given up hope, the weight that held her moved.

In that moment, he had drawn her out, and they were rolling down the slope together. And then it was his turn to faint.

It was the full light of a grey, sudden dawn when he came to his senses. His head was pillowed in Viola's lap. He stirred, saw her, breathed her name.

"Then he sprang up. And, to his wonder and delight, she rose to her feet.

"You can stand—you can walk!" he cried.

"I'm not even scratched!" she said. "It—oh, it was a miracle, John! All the time I was held there, with the fire coming nearer and nearer—but I wasn't hurt—I was just caught by the berth when it was torn loose. If I'd been lying down I would have been killed, but I was sitting up when the crash came."

"Thank God!" he cried. "Thank God!"

"And you," she said. "You have saved my life, John. What—what has happened?"

"Things too terrible to think about," he said, with a shudder. "I have seen things, while I looked for you, that I can never forget."

A man, wild eyed, no more than the ghost of Jordan, stood before them.

"Mrs. Hardin!" he cried, joyfully. "You're safe! I thought you'd been killed! Have you got it—the box?"

She stared at him.

"The box?" she said. "What box?"

She looked behind her at the smouldering wreck.

"It's in there," she said gently. "If anything is left of it. But that I doubt, Mr. Jordan."

Jordan stood at her. His mind seemed scarcely to be working.

"Oh!" he said. "Yes, I see. He looked, all at once, like a very old man. 'I see,' he repeated. 'Well, it doesn't matter. I—I'm glad you are safe.'"

John and Viola stared at one another. John raised clenched hands. "If I could send him to the chair for this—the murderer!" he cried.

"Hush!" said Viola gently. "I think God will take care of his punishment, John."

He was still.

"Where—where is Phil?" she asked. He started.

"Phil? He—he came here. I heard—he was being watched. He came, rushing like a madman, when he heard the bridge was going to stop the train—to find you."

"With you take me to him? Will you help me to find him?"

"Are you strong enough?" he said, jealously.

"So—oh, yes," she said. "John, we must go."

They stood facing one another. And suddenly she came to him, and her arms went about him.

"Oh, my dear—my dear!" she said. "Once—once I thought I was dead. The last time I saw you was when you helped me to find him."

For a moment he held her in his arms, and their lips met.

Then slowly, clinging to him, she made her way down into the scene of horror and despair below.

Gradually now order was being restored. All the lives that could be saved had been redeemed. The fire was out. No longer did the groans and cries of the injured sound. All had been saved, saved tenderly, gently, to the waiting train. Here and there bodies still lay. They had thought of the living first, since none could longer help the dead.

Men moved about assembling meaningless, but each had his task to do. Already engineers and mechanics were at work preparing to open the way for traffic, which, no matter what had happened, must be kept moving.

On all sides blank looks met John's inquiries for Phil Hardin. "President Hardin? Didn't see him at all, sir. Oh—Mrs. Hardin! On that train? Thank God, you're safe, Ma'am!"

So it went as they made their painful way down into the ravine, and up the other side to where the second relief train waited now, the first having been sent back to Plainsville with its pitiful load, so that the injured might, as soon as might be, be placed in the hospital. None had seen Phil Hardin.

And then suddenly they came to a spot where a handcar lay, turned on its side, beside the track. By it lay a still, shrouded figure. Something made John turn back the sheet. And Phil's face, peaceful sheet. And he was dead. A doctor, seeing them, came up.

"Ah!" he said. "Queer case. President Hardin. Rushed out on a handcar. Literally killed himself—heart couldn't stand the strain he put on it. He must have died just as he got here—they found him on the car dead when the train came along. Oh—I beg your pardon—Mrs. Hardin! I didn't know. Well—your husband died like a hero!"

It was Phil Hardin's epitaph. He had his measure of responsibility for the disaster that had occurred—but at least he had given his life in an effort to avert it.

Viola stood looking down at the dead form. Then she stooped, and her lips brushed the dead forehead for a moment.

"It's better so," she said quietly. THE END

L. F. GROVER EXONERATED IN DAMAGE SUIT

L. F. Grover named as defendant in a damage suit for $1950 growing out of an automobile accident in Oakland in June, 1926, was exonerated from all blame in the Superior Court of Alameda county yesterday.

The suit grew out of a crash at Telegraph and Fortieth street, when a machine driven by George A. Dunbar, of Berkeley, ran headlong into the car driven by Grover. Dunbar's machine was completely wrecked and he and a passenger with him at the time were injured.

The plaintiff endeavored to show that Grover was traveling at an excessive rate of speed while turning off Telegraph into Fortieth. Evidence of witnesses proved that Dunbar himself was exceeding the speed limit while Grover was not going more than five miles an hour at the time of the accident. Grover was represented by Clara D. Horner, local attorney.

WHITE BLACK SHEEP, FILM AT RICHMOND

"The White Black Sheep," Richard Barthelmess' latest inspiration starring feature, which comes to the Richmond theatre today, for an engagement of two days, is a story of a boy who, disgraced and wrongly accused, joins the British army in the Near East and there proves his true worth and incidentally wins a great love.

Richard Barthelmess enacts the role of Robert Kincairn, scion of a long line of British soldiers, and Patsy Ruth Miller portrays the role of Zelle, the Greek dancing girl, with whom he falls in love in a picturesque cafe in Palestine.

Constance Howard has the unsympathetic role of the girl who betrays him and thus sends him to a distant land.

The picture was made under the direction of Sidney Olcott and contains an exceptional cast.

Other screen features on the same program include "Officer of the Day," an Imperial comedy; and "Prizma," the screen magazine.

Nichol Final Rites Thursday

Last rites for Mrs. Jane Mills Nichol, member of the pioneer Richmond family, who passed away in Berkeley early yesterday morning, will be conducted from the First Christian church on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Frank A. Woten will officiate. Interment will follow in Mountain View cemetery, Oakland.

Mrs. Nichol was 66 years of age at the time of her death.

Born in Iowa she came to Richmond 39 years ago and resided in this city for 27 years. She was the daughter-in-law of the late John Nichol, "the founder of Richmond."

Mrs. Nichol is survived by her husband, Joseph Nichol, of Richmond; her brother, James C. Mills, of San Pablo; and sisters: Miss Emma T. Mills, of San Francisco, Miss Mae E. Mills and Mrs. Adele Moise, of Oakland, Mrs. Clara B. Lyon, of Berkeley, Mrs. Mable Rox, of Manteca, California, and the late Miss Angeline Mills of San Pablo.

Mrs. Parker Is Granted Divorce

An interlocutory decree of divorce has been granted to Mrs. Jennie Parker by Judge H. V. Alvarado yesterday.

Mrs. Parker charged extreme cruelty in her complaint. The couple married in 1923 and were separated September 10 last. Attorney Tsar N. Calfee was counsel for the plaintiff.

Browning Case Is Rested; To Be Resumed In Two Weeks

fell from Daddy's pendant lips. At the conclusion of the hearing Judge Seeger remarked that if he ever had another case like this he would hear it in private. He gently chided the newspaper reporters for adding comment to their reports, but I hope and trust that the court will not deem it comment if I say one little word of this statement that other cases of this kind will be heard in private. The word is amen.

Big Day For Daddy

But it was a big day for old Daddy Browning as he sat up there on the witness stand, with the wife of his bosom eyeing him now disdainfully, and now rather wistfully, but always eying him. Daddy's maw-in-law also eyed him, using two eyes for the purpose. Daddy kept his own eyes, which are rather glittering eyes, on other points of the compass. He scarcely ever glanced at the wife of his bosom, and her parent.

He wore a blue suit, and a high turn-down linen collar that seemed about to strangle him. He kept jerking his head forward to free his neck from the embrace of the collar like an old snapping turtle popping its beaver out of its shell.

Daddy had a reddish-purplish complexion peculiar to golfers, or Scotch inhalers, though he took occasion to deny vehemently that he ever drank to any extent in the fifty-two years of his life. He said fifty-two. He looked older, what with the wattles on his jaws and his thin white hair.

He wore a very fancy neck-tie, with a diamond set in gold stuck in it. An inside pocket of his coat bulged with papers. Three fat cigars peeped out the upper outside pocket of his coat, as usual. They must be "prop" cigars, or Daddy replaces them every day.

He kept his hands folded in his lap, twiddling the fingers from time to time as he pondered some question. Occasionally he would wrinkle up his forehead, and peep up at the ceiling as time to time he pondered some question. Occasionally he would wrinkle up his forehead, and peep up at the ceiling as he thought over some interrogation.

He talked so rapidly that the words fairly tumbled over each other. Once or twice under cross-examination he got quite excited, and yelled his answers.

One occasion was when Epstein, in a most abashed manner, handed him a photograph and asked him if it was one that he had taken home to Peaches, and said to be a photograph of Marion Dockerill. Daddy recoiled as the halliff poked the picture at him, and bawled:

"No that's a filthy picture. I'd be ashamed to show it if I were you."

Your ever-blushing correspondent got a fleeting glimpse of the photo as it passed from hand to hand, and he violates no confidence in stating that it was, and doubtless still is, a photographic reproduction of a lady who seems to be posing with no drapes of any consequence about her person, not even as much as the proverbial fig leaf.

"But you weren't ashamed to show it to your wife?" queried Epstein.

"Framed" Says Daddy

"Yes, I was—may be you showed it to her," roared Daddy, his head jumping forward from his collar, like a man "shooting" his cuffs. "That's a filthy picture. I understand you stole it out of some place to frame me with."

This statement was ordered stricken out by the court. Daddy fingered the picture very gingerly, but he refused to identify it as it is likeness of Marion Dockerill.

As I gathered, Miss Dockerill is an exponent of some mysterious art of science known as numerology. Daddy said she gave both him and Peaches "readings," but Peaches didn't care for her's. Then Mr. Epstein handed him what purported to be a picture of Miss Dockerill taken from a newspaper and asked Daddy to compare this with the one he shrank from and say if they were of the same person.

Daddy handled the pictures as if he feared they might bite him, and finally remarked, somewhat cryptically:

"Well, in one she seems to have 'hat on.'"

There was some disappointment among the spectators that the original photo was not handed around more freely. It was no worse than some of the testimony, at that, though it might cause more of a sensation if hung in a hotel lobby.

Epstein impatiently hawed and hawed no little with Peaches' attorney and had Epstein quite impatient. At times, also, Judge Seeger got a bit impatient with Epstein, and mildly rebuked the attorney for some of his questions to Daddy. On direct examination at the hands of his own attorney, John E. Mack, Daddy answered with surprising swiftness.

It was when Epstein asked Daddy about Peaches' charges concerning his relations with Dorothy Sunshine Browning, his ten-year-old adopted daughter, that Daddy let out another yell.

"I think more of that child than I do of my life," he shouted. He bellowed that he has never even heard of some of the other things that Peaches alleges against him. Daddy has quite a resounding voice when he puts all his lung-power behind it, though it was dropped to a low whisper at times during the cross-examination. He has what you might call a Brooklyn accent, saying "bold" for bird, and "pofect" for perfect.

His tale was mainly the sad, sad tale of what the Broadway boys term an "ap-say" meaning sap, trying to catch up with a little youth after he has passed that old fifty yard line. By the way, the roaring forties contributed a few listeners—in today. They never heard anything like this down town.

Called At 11:25

They called him to the stand at 11:25 this morning, and Daddy for some reason did not move with alacrity. He got up from his chair very slowly, whispered a moment to Attorney Mack, then ambled to the witness chair. He somehow seemed very, very old as he hoisted his frame into the chair. Peaches and Mrs. Heenan watched him very closely and Peaches' face broke into a wide smile when Daddy testified that he had walked up to him when he was talking with some other girls at a dance at the McAlpin, was introduced to him, and asked him to dance with her.

Daddy rather gave the impression that Peaches, then fifteen years old, pursued him hotly in those dear, dead days of some months ago, calling him up, and one thing and another. So they were married, as the movies say, and as you must know by this time.

That mysterious burning of Peaches by acid came into Daddy's discourse, but he could throw no light on it. He said the Heenans had little to eat, and their rent and radio installments were unpaid, and that he took care of all those little matters, besides giving Peaches $300 for clothes to enter the Spence, Central, or Scutter schools, all quite fashionable institutions.

Instead, he said, she had gone to Earl Carroll's theatre and got a job, not as a bath-tub exhibit, as you might suspect, but as an extra girl. This disappointed him no end, Daddy said. He told her it was no life for a girl. After the acid incident he paid Mrs. Heenan $50 per week to take care of Peaches, and paid a Mrs. Mayer as a night nurse.

"Did you call at the Heenan's home until the Pizzaro incident?" asked Mack.

Epstein objected to that question forthwith. There has been nothing said about Mr. Pizzaro, who was Pizzaro, anyway? Well, it came out that Pizzaro had been hanging around the Heenan's muttering about getting evidence to put Peaches in an institution.

Denies Charges

So Daddy figured there was only one way out. Peaches would be married, as I have said before, to a good wife. So they were. Then Daddy proceeded to a categorical denial of each and every incident of the nuptial night, and thereafter, alleged by Peaches as reflecting upon his character as a gentleman and scholar and causing her mental pain and anguish.

He took her everywhere, parties, dances, theatres. He spent his dough on her for clothes and jewelry, Russian sable, and ermine coats. He called her up two or three times a day. He never hurled 'phone books at her, never slugged her, never set off an alarm clock in her ear, never crawled around on his hands and knees in her bed chamber and said "woof, woof," as Peaches alleges.

"I may have crawled around on my hands and knees when I was a baby, but never since," he said. "You are not in your second childhood, then?" asked Mack. "I hope not," replied Daddy, but the vote in the courtroom might not have been unanimous. Oh, yes, about the grander—the African honking gander that has been going kah-donking the hearing. It seems that they were at a lawn party one day, at the home of some folks named Reeves, and they had the gander, and Peaches thought it would be just dandy to own the gander.

So, eager to grant her slightest wish, Daddy borrowed the gander and Peaches tied a ribbon around its neck, and down to Long Beach they went to parade the honker along the board walk, and have it photographed. That was that, Daddy said. He never threatened to kill Peaches and her mother, and never go drunk. The sandpapering of Peaches as one of the causes of her mental anguish, was nothing more than a little clobbering on one of Peaches' own shoes. It was tight, so he sandpapered it looser for her. Incidentally, Daddy mentioned that he often wore Peaches' tennis shoes and house slippers, and that she wore his, because they fit both ways, which statement caused some of the curious in the court to try to get a peek at Peaches' feet. Epstein learned from Daddy that he wears a number six shoe.

He said Peaches wanted an apartment on Park avenue with "all corner rooms," which would have been a lot of corners in any man's town, and that furthermore she wanted six or seven rooms, because her mother wanted to live with her, and mother wanted to dogs while Peaches wanted three.

"Did you have any idea that your wife or mother-in-law was going to leave you," asked Mack. "Not my wife," replied Daddy. "And your mother-in-law?" "I er-ah-er—I was hoping so," replied Daddy, and Mrs. Heenan laughed loudly. "As the poet says, a hopeless hope," commented Mack. This was about the only dig Daddy took at Mrs. Heenan, and he seemed ashamed of it, for he quickly added:

"I didn't mean that—I didn't mind her staying with us."

Revival Planned In This City For Month Of March

Roy Gouley, advance agent for the Bulger evangelistic troupe, met with ministers of this city yesterday to formulate plans for the reception of the group in Richmond in March. Committees are to be organized and the place for the meetings selected. The union of all Protestant churches in the city is bringing Dr. Bulger here.

Dr. W. W. Giberson was named general chairman. Gouley will speak a few words at several mid-week services tonight and on Thursday night he will appear before the Richmond Church Fellowship at 6:30 o'clock.

Those at the luncheon yesterday were Gouley, Dr. Giberson, Rev. E. W. Haney, Rev. H. K. Sanborne, Rev. C. G. Lindemann, Rev. S. T. Himes and Rev. Frank Woten.

McLean Fined On Driving Charge

Harold McLean of San Pablo who yesterday wrecked the automobile in which he was driving when he crashed into a divider in the subway on Macdonald avenue, was fined $250 and given a suspended sentence of 90 days in jail by Police Judge C. A. Odell yesterday morning, on a charge of reckless driving.

Miss Mary Olive, 350 Spruce street, San Francisco, who was riding with McLean when the accident occurred was removed to a San Francisco hospital Monday following treatment given at the Abbott Emergency hospital for serious cuts about her right eye. It is reported that she may possibly lose the sight of the eye.

Judge Odell imposed the suspended sentence pending an investigation of the alleged intoxication of McLean at the time of the accident. He was released following payment of the fine yesterday.

ANTI-FOREIGN OUTBREAK IS SEEN IN OFFING

Americans missing in the interior of China.

No word has been received from them since January 29 it was stated and grave fears are felt for their safety.

The state department admitted that the last definite word received from the upper Yangtze river was the dispatch from Admiral Williams, commander in chief of the American forces in Chinese waters on January 29 reporting the Americans as missing.

The State Department was in touch with Admiral Williams again today by radio but he replied that he could give no further information. It is possible the unaccounted for Americans may have elected to remain in the interior he said.

He has received no further word and it is impossible for his forces to furnish protection unless the missing Americans can make their way to river ports he added.

Every report to the government emphasized the belief that the 104 Americans and 165 Britishers have taken a chance of remaining in interior China. It was pointed out that they were offered the opportunity to leave several days ago and did not do so.

United States Prepared
At the same time President Coolidge let it be known that the United States is prepared for any emergency in China.

The President made it plain that the United States will not demand or even ask for the evacuation of Americans from China unless Americans wish to leave. In this event it was stated that this government will afford them every facility.

It was explained however that the Yangtze valley is about to become the scene of a clash between armies of the Cantonese and North China factions which will make evacuation of Americans still more difficult. This battle it was stated is already raging within a radius of fifty miles from Hankow. This is about 600 miles up the Yangtze river from Shanghai where the American naval forces are concentrated. Practically all Americans have left Hankow.

The navy department announced that 1200 marines mobilized at San Diego have sailed for Guam with upwards of 5,700 men concentrated in or near Chinese waters. President Coolidge is of the opinion that this government will be able to provide adequate protection in case of an emergency.

No better tobacco ever smuggled in a makin's paper

THERE'S no deep, dark secret about it. P.A. makes a better home-rolled cigarette because it's better tobacco. You can figure it out on your fingers, if you get what I mean. Just wrap your fingers around a makin's paper filled with P.A. Light up. . . .

Pull that cool, comfortable smoke into your system. What a wonderful taste! Mild. Mellow. Fragrant. Exhaust the adjectives and you are still a mile from describing the taste of a cigarette rolled with Prince Albert. Experience alone can give you the picture.

You'll start rolling them the minute you roll out in the morning, with time out for meals. End on end. How easy they roll. That's because P.A. is crimp-cut, the ideal form for cool-smoking cigarettes. Try this better cigarette tobacco today.

Prince Albert is a double-barreled tobacco that hits your smoke-spot either way—cigarette or pipe. Lots of fellows tell me they never could smoke a pipe before they discovered P.A. I know what they mean. The tobacco's the thing. And P.A.'s the tobacco!

P.A. is sold everywhere. And always with every bit of bite and punch reserved by the Prince Albert process.

—no other tobacco is like it!

Will Enjoy a Happy New Year Blood Test Shows Negative

Dec. 28, 1926.
At the beginning of last summer my blood test showed two positives; that is two x's. It had previously been four x's (positives).

After I failed to get relief by treatments of hypodermic shots I decided to give the Fong Wan Herbs a trial. I drank the herbs for only one month. Nevertheless, when I had a blood test taken again on Dec. 24, 1926, the test showed negative. So my blood is thoroughly cleansed and is O. K. at last. I shall certainly enjoy a Happy New Year. Because of my gratitude for the Fong Wan Herb Treatment, I am glad to give this testimonial.

3 Dead; 13 Buried in Fire

(By Pacific & Atlantic)

Three firemen lost their lives after 13 were burned under tons of debris when roof of building in New York's East Side, crashed through onto them. Priest crawled into ruins to administer last rites to one victim. Here is building, flames seething from windows, as fighter mounts fire escape.

L. J. Thomas Holds Opening Of Salesrooms

Thomas stated that he believed the new firm was one of the best equipped to give satisfaction to Richmond auto buyers.

"We are proud of the cars which we have on display," he said. "The best craftsmanship in the motor industry went into their construction. Their appearance speaks for itself. The mechanical excellence of the Studebaker is attested by reports from more than 800 owners, whose cars have been driven 100,000 miles and more and are still in service."

The President, the Studebaker Big Six custom sedan, was given an especial place of honor. It reveals the long level lines of a custom car, settling low over disc wheels, lacquered in ebony with a belt of thistle green striped with Siskiyoun yellow.

It rests on a wheelbase of 127 inches. The Big Six engine is the quiet L-head type, cast in bloc. The Society of Automobile Engineers gives only seven American cars an equal horsepower rating, and they sell for two to four times as much.

The car is upholstered in fine Chase mohair in form fitting pattern with broadlace trim. The roomy interior is enriched by hardware of Butler silver finish, silk curtains, opal iridescent dome and rear corner lights, and a smoking set and vanity case.

PROPOSERS OF ADQUATE NAVY WIN IN SENATE

(Continued from Page 1.) ed in defeat of the provision by one vote. Later on the opposing democrats learned that the President was stoutly opposed to having an appropriation made, and senate leaders now have been informed that when the bill is returned to the House the amendment carrying the appropriation will be adopted.

If the House enacts the amendment as predicted, President Coolidge may veto the entire appropriation bill and urge administration leaders to have the amendments eliminated, as he is known to be strongly opposed to having any money set aside at this session for warship construction.

The veto by which the amendment was carried in the senate brought about some curious combinations. It was passed by the votes of 25 democrats and 24 republicans, among the latter being a considerable number of administration supporters, such as Bingham, Cameron, Edge, Goff, Godding, Hall, McLean, Metcalf, Pepper, Phipps, Schall and Shortridge. Other republicans voting for it were: Couzens, Dale, Gould, Johnson, Keyes, McNary, Means, Moses, Oddie, Robinson of Indiana, Stanfield and Watson.

Democrats who voted for the appropriation were: Ashurst, Byard, Bratton, Broussard, Bruce, Copeland, Edwards, Fletcher, Glass, George, Gerry, Harris, Harrison, Hawes, Kendrick, McKellar, Overman, Reed of Missouri, Smith, Steek, Stephens, Trammell, Tyson, Walsh of Montana and Walsh of Massachusetts.

Only 18 republicans stood by the President in the effort to defeat the appropriation. They were: Borah, Capper, Denen, Ernst, Fess, Frazier, Gillett, Jones of Washington, LaFollette, Lenroot, McMaster, Nye, Pine, Reed of Pennsylvania, Sackett, Stewart, Warren and Willis. Supporting those republicans were the following eight democrats: Caraway, Dill, Ferris, Hefflin, Jones of New Mexico, King, Sheppard, and Wheeler, Shipstead, Farmer-Labor member, also voted in the negative.

The amendment was called up by Chairman Hale of the Naval Affairs committee shortly after the senate met. It was voted upon with debate, as opponents of the appropriation realized a few days ago that there were enough votes pledged to support the amendment to insure its passage and that further debate was useless.

For the benefit of those who cannot attend the San Francisco Auto Show we are having a special display of all Buick models this week in our newly enlarged salesrooms. Among the models on display is the Town Brougham with the series 115-inch chassis, which was the outstanding feature of the New York Show.

See the full line of the Greatest Buick ever built. Drive it, ask questions, make comparisons. The more you wisely investigate the more you will appreciate why Buick is the outstanding leader.
